Patients with mucogingival deformities commonly present in the clinic, but its diagnosis and management can be challenging and often overlooked.

When is a gum recession “treatable”, and when is it not? How do we advise our patients on the options available, and what is the threshold for referral?

For orthodontic patients, when should we send for gingival grafting? What is the difference between an FGG and a CTG?

This session aims to share some of the thought processes and solutions for the management of patients with gingival recession.
